ORIENTAL POPPIES

There are few perennials which have grown in popularity as rapidly as the Oriental Poppy. This is no doubt due to the wide range of color in which they may now be obtained, their hardiness and general satisfaction.

They should only be planted in late summer or early fall, if you want good blossoms next spring. The tops die down after blooming and if not disturbed they will last for a long time.

The blossoms are much used for cut flowers and if you will cut just before the buds open and plunge the ends of the stems in very hot water for a few minutes, they will keep for several days.

There are many seedlings offered but we have selected a range of color from white to the darkest red which have been tried and proven worth while.
